A MAMMOTH WALNUT TREE.—Mr.
J. B. Merchant has sold the big walnut tree on his farm in Surratt's District for $100. For years lumbermen have tried to buy the tree from Mr. Merchant, but he would not think of parting with it. A few years ago lightning struck the tree and it began to die, first in the branches, the signs of its decay gradually spreading over the whole tree, and the roots on one side were entirely rotted. As it stood close to the house it might some day fall and cause damage, perhaps loss of life.
Among those who had tried to buy the tree was E. E. McClintock, of Lincoln, Fairfax county, Va., who had his eyes on the old monarch a long while. He finally induced Mr. Merchant to take $100 for his tree, and in March Mr. Mc-Clintock began to take it out. The tree was grubbed up by the roots, these, nowadays, with the stump, being quite as valuable as any part of the tree. It took twenty-four days to dig the old fellow out. If left away from the house, breaking but little in the fall, seven huge logs were sawed from the trunk. The butt log was seven feet in diameter. One seven-foot log was forty-two inches through; another ten foot log was twenty-two inches in diameter; one twelve-foot log was thirty inches in diameter; another twelve-foot log was thirty inches through; an eight foot log was forty-four inches in diameter. The whole tree, says Mr. McClintock, will make 5,000 feet board measure. Worked up by shaving machines into veneer, the waste is reduced to a minimum, and every bit of the tree is made to count.
Mr. McClintock has engaged an express company to haul the immense logs into town and they will be unloaded at the Baltimore and Ohio steam launch dock.
Photographs will be taken of the butt log, when it is brought to the city. Mr. McClintock makes a pretty snug profit from the tree, as the walnut is better than expected, proving to be curly walnut all through. He has sold the walnut at $200 a thousand feet, and J. W. Van Horne, at 10th and G streets, export shipper of walnut and other lumber, will take charge of sending the logs to New York, where they will be shaved and probably exported.

The tree was one hundred and eighty years old, according to the count of the rings in the butt log.

There is no telling what has happened beneath its giant branches. All the children in the neighborhood for many generations back have played beneath the shade of the old tree, and not a few young people have done their courting with its benign protection and connivance.

Mr. Merchant writing to us about the big tree, under date of April 20th, says: "At present writing after working three days with a large force of men and 12 horses they have got the butt log about one mile. They find that they are perfectly unable to do any thing with it and men are at work today sawing it in two parts. As it was at first loaded the Anacostia bridge would not hold it and they were taking it by the pike and across the new bridge at Twining City—Marlboro, Md., Galette.

A TALE OF BURIED TREASURE.—W.
S. Hancock, late storekeeper at the Topeka, Kan., penitentiary, appeared on Tuesday before the legislative committee that is investigating the charges preferred against S. W. Chase, warden.
He testified that while he was employed at the penitentiary he was approached by George H. Schonewaldt, a convict, and informed that there was a large treasure hidden in Arkansas, the location of which he knew. He repeated the story to Warden Chase, who in turn told it to Gov. Lewelling.
After the matter was discussed with Schonewaldt, Gov. Lewelling granted him a pardon, and two days after he was delivered at the prison, after working with the warden, and Hancock went with the pardon convict to Arkansas in search of the treasure. While on the way to the point indicated as the hiding place Schonewaldt gave his distinguished companions the slip, and has not since been seen. Schonewaldt was one of the most notorious criminals in the prison and was serving his third term. He had told the treasure story to three of Warden Chase's predecessors.

Food

—But No
Appetite

is a worse fix than "appetite but no food." Can you eat a meal with relish, or can't you? If you can't your stomach probably needs looking after, and this is the way to look after it: Take a tablespoonful of

Brown's Iron Bitters

in a little water, three times a day for a week and you'll be surprised how well you'll feel, and how hungry you'll be, and—but isn't this enough?

Brown's Iron Bitters is a medicine for all ages—children like it, and old persons nearly always need it.
It is pleasant to take and will not stain the teeth, nor cause constipation. See the crossed red lines on the wrapper.
